IMMIGRATION. ITo the Editor of the "Times.")

Sir,-I have received by the West India Mail, from Mr. Loughran, the magistrate present at the tragedy on the estate of Devonshire Castle, in Essequebo, British Guiana, a semi-official account of the proceedings at the inquest. Mr. Loughran is a magistrate lately appointed an Irich gentleman, who, as I know, went out with an earnest desire to discharge his difficult duties in the colony in an independent and faithful way. After reciting these proceedings I ought to say, as I introduced the matter to your readers, that Mr. Loughran appears not only to be free from blame, but to have acted with equal decision and humanity. The subject is so important that I beg leave to cite his own account under oath of the antecedent oir-

MOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All tac new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming evergises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to Nos. 2, 4, 8, and 8, Hollywood Road, Hongkong. say that the American papers assure us that | and is now open for families and gentle | make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretotore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalisers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples

TIRED MOTHERS. little elbow leans upon vonr'knee. Your tired knee, that has so much to bear; A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly From underneath a thatch of tangled hair. Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch Of warm, moist fingers, folding yours so tight; You.do not prize this blessing overmuch, You almost are too tired to pray to night: But it is blessedness! A year ago I did not see it as I do to-day-We are so dull and thankless: and too slow To catch the sunshine till it slips away.

And now it seems surpassing strange to me, That, while I were the badge of motherhood, I did not kiss more oft, and tenderly, That little child that brought me only good, And if, some night when you sit down to rest This lisping tongue that chatters constantly; If from your own the dimpled hands had slipped And ne'er would nestle in your palm again; If the white feet into their grave had trippled I could not blame you for your heart-ach

I wonder so that mothers ever fret At little children clinging to their gown; Or that the foot-prints, when the days are wet, Are ever black enough to make them frown. If I could find a little muddy boot, Or cap, or jacket on my chamber floor; If I could kies a rosy, restless foot, And bear its patter in my home once more;

If I could mend a broken cart to-day, To-morrow make a kite, to reach the sky-There is no woman in God's world could say She was more blissfully content than I. But ah! the dainty pillow next my own Is never rumpled by a shining head;
My singing birdling from its nest is flown; The little boy I used to kiss is dead!

GEORGE THE SECOND AS A WIT. George the Second was not a humourist but he would have made a first-rate actor of "genteel comedy" had not fate cast him for another line of characters in the drama life. Shortly after his accession he commanded a play at the theatre in Lincoln's Inn Fields. The house was full, but as the king kept it waiting, the murmurs of their displeasure fell upon his ear as he entered his box, three-quarters of an hour behind time. As he caught the unwelcome sounds he turned to Mr. Rich, the manager, who waited on him, as if he might gather from that official some explanation of the phenomenen. Suddenly the stage coach stopped, and the driver, from his throne, in short, dicesive tones, issued his decree that we must get out and walk up the hill, at the base of which we had arrived. The tone in which the driver spoke satisfied us that it was useless to argue the matter with him, or to hesitate to obov the mandate. We accordingly descended. and toiled up the long hill-for it was very long, and we were very tired before the summit, was reached. But all things have an end, and so does a walk up hill. The apex was reached at last, and a most exciting scene opened to our view. In a momentall wearibreath we stood and gazed upon the scene below us. The mountain was covered with a dense growth of huge firs and deep-tangled undergrowth of trailing maples. A fire had been started somewhere, and was now raging with great fury; the long, forked tongues of flame would dart out, seize upon the inflamable pitch of the fir trees, and in less time than it takes to describe it run up to the branches and play in fantastic shapes about the dark foliage. THE WOLDS OF LANCASHIRE county to Horncastle, where they may said, speaking roughly, to converge and die away. These are part of the Pennine Range, the backbone of England, and after stretching through Yorkshire, dip under the Humber, to reappear on the opposite side, in their familiar chalk and green sand, for a strip of some forty-eight miles in length. A breadth of fourteen miles covers these three ridges with intervening flais of arable land and low grassy bottoms, through which occasionally runs a rivulet. Fine views over a vast extent of campaign country may be obtained from the summits of these wolds, which are about five hundred feet high, terminated on the one hand by Lincoln Cathedral; by Yorkshire, the Spurn Light, and the German Ocean, on the other side .- From "Autumnal Troutfishing in the Lincolnshire Wolds," in the "Cornhill Magazine" for November.
